Christina Burch: Sea of Blood

The title of Sea of Blood comes from the name given to the central channel of the human body as described in the ancient Chinese medical classic Huandi Neijing. Christina Burch, born in New York/raised in Nashville, is a practicing Buddhist. In fact this is what brought her to Ann Arbor.

The paintings in this exhibition are based on the poetic envisioning of the energetic body. On many levels this work investigates common ground between eastern and western medicine. For example, the central channel, or column of energy, unfolds, branches out and develops over a lifetime, much like the ancestral DNA that each of us are born with. The ancient eastern idea is a more poetic and intuitive view, with a very elaborate system of mapping, which describes what we've come to understand from contemporary science.

This exhibition will be on view through December 13 in the Rotunda Gallery of Building 18.
